Report

MARKET WATCH

Data suggests GTA Housing Market Rebounds From COVID－19．
Merely one month ago，the Toronto Regional Real Estate Board（TRREB）released their April report showing an unprecedented drop in sales．Their May report，however， sheds some light on a hopeful recovery，revealing an increase in the number of sales．

A total of 4，606 sales were recorded in May 2020，a substantial drop of 53．7\％ measured year－over－year against the 9,950 sales recorded during the same period in 2019.

This is still an improvement over the 67．1\％the year－over－year decline reported for April 2020．Measured month－over－month，actual May sales increased by $55.2 \%$ ，while seasonally adjusted May sales increased by $53.2 \%$ ．
Similarly，listings took a big drop year－over－year last month，mirroring the drop in sales with a dip by $53.1 \%$ to 9,104 ．As with sales，the month－over－month metric for May shows a major improvement over the chaos of April，rising by $47.5 \%$ ．

＂WThile the public heath and economic concerns surrounding COVID－19 continue to impact the housing market，the May sales result represented a marked improvement over April．TRREB released updated Ipsos consumer intentions polling results in May that indicated that 27 per cent of GTA households were likely to purchase a home over the next year．Providing we continue to see a gradual re－opening of the economy，it is very possible that home sales will continue to improve in the coming months．

Declines in both supply and demand as well as a global pandemic have had little impact on inflating home prices．Despite these factors，the average selling price for all home types combined climbed by $3 \%$ last month compared to May，2019， and rising by an even more pronounced $4.6 \%$ measured month－over－month．The average price of a GTA home now sits at $$ 863,599$ ．

＂With home sales and new listings continuing to trend in unison in May， market conditions remained balanced．This balance was evidenced Canada＇s long－term－over－year average price growth slightly above the Batained during the gradual re－opening of the GTA economy，a moderate pace during the gradual re－opening of the GTA economy，a moderate pace of year－over－year price growth could continue as we move through リ
